

Tutoring has begun!

8/6 I tutored 3 siblings in phonics and early literacy. The youngest practiced writing numbers and the oldest started learning multiplication.

8/8 Today I had these plus 2 more. A fifth grader joined us who could read well, but had not mastered her multiplication tables and needed help with long division. The third grader had another lesson in multiplication. Younger kids practiced addition or tracing numbers.

I had also asked the younger ones to copy words. One of them didn't have a clue how to draw letters so he had some practice with my hand on his and me modeling and giving him letters to trace. The others worked on identifying beginning, middle and final sounds and matching words to a picture.

There was a 4th grader who tried to join late, but the apartment complex manager wouldn't let us remain on the deck of one of the families. We have a new location just outside this complex for next week.
